The possibilities for third-party suppliers, integrators, and custom contractors is also open to innovators. Each manufacturer has a different level of involvement in booth construction and graphics. In general, the manufacturers we work with give us the basic guidelines we need, and we do the rest. There are however many manufacturers that have teams of designers and engineers to provide assistance, and some who are more involved in the design of the booth structure, graphics, and general setup. Building a booth for your company can be a significant investment. Many products can be purchased for over $5,000, with some costing more than $10,000. In addition to the price, there is the investment in time and manpower. Most companies have at least one person dedicated to their booth. If you have an idea of what you want, it is important to decide early on how you want the booth to be designed. To some, the idea of having a full-blown designer create a brand for you is like asking for the moon. But, by doing some research, you can find what you want, but also have a designer help you decide how to best implement your ideas. Booth Design When it comes to the design of a booth, it is important to have a concept to build on. This can be done in several ways. A notebook on a shelf. A laptop on a table. A full desktop or all-in-one computer. There are also companies that specialize in designing the look and feel of the booth for you, though they will often use an existing company to help with logistics and deliver the final product. This includes 3D modelers and animators, 3D printers, and specialists in graphics, animation, and printing. Another thing to consider when starting the design process is how your customers will interact with the booth. Is it going to be a static object, or will you be moving around the booth to hand out information? Are your customers going to be standing close by or in chairs? Make sure your booth is large enough to accommodate those customers and make them feel comfortable while they are there. They will be spending most of their time sitting in your booth, so you want to make sure it is equipped with all the comforts they will need. In addition to this, the booth will need to be structurally sound. Some booths are built with materials, such as wood, steel, or even concrete. Others have a structure
