The midfielder was in contention for his club's tour of China last month but has not been involved for the Gunners since the Community Shield win over Manchester City in August. Wenger confirmed Arteta would be 'back training' next week but he will not be considered for the game in Chisinau. The Gunners boss said: "Arteta is in the training camp at the moment, the treatment is going well, so it will take time. "He will be back training next week. He's in competition for a spot in the first team and he's out of the squad. "It's a bit of coincidence that I played him in the last game and now he is not in the squad." Wenger also confirmed youngsters Serge Gnabry and Chuba Akpom will start the match at Wembley on Tuesday. The Gunners boss said: "They will be involved in the game tomorrow. Gnabry and Akpom are both back training with the squad." Arsenal will be without Robin van Persie, who is recovering from a knee injury, as the England international missed the start of the season with an ankle problem. Wenger added: "Van Persie will come into the game, hopefully, next week. He's progressing well. We'll see, he has to be fully fit. "He's been a bit unlucky with a problem on his ankle but he's progressing well." Meanwhile, Wenger is pleased to have striker Olivier Giroud back in full training. The France international has been sidelined since mid-September when he suffered a calf problem, and Wenger says he is close to a return to action. "He's in full training, which is
