Children with hereditary hemochromatosis may present at a later age than adults and, for these reasons, their diagnosis is challenging. In contrast to most other iron overload disorders, there are no cases of children with HFE-related iron overload described to date. The authors identified six Jewish Ashkenazi children with iron overload. Mutation analysis in the HFE gene identified homozygous mutations in all cases: C282Y, p.Q71X, and p.S65R. Five of these patients also had a compound heterozygous C282Y mutation, and one patient was homozygous for the H63D mutation. In
