Pro Evolution Soccer 2013 is a football game developed and published by Konami.Q: Why does inserting a value of a custom object, using Map.put(), throw a NullPointerException? I have created a custom object which contains a Map as a field. I am trying to insert a Map using Map.put(key,value) but am getting a NullPointerException. The key is my object's identifier (itself a String) and value is another custom object. I have isolated the problem to the following code: Map users = getUsers(); User user = new User("username","address"); String key = user.getUserId().toString(); Map usersMap = users.get(key); usersMap.put(key, user); I am getting the following error: java.lang.NullPointerException at util.Map.put(Map.java:156) at test.insertMap(test.java:41) at test.main(test.java:12) Can someone tell me why this is happening? And, what is the best way to fix it? Thanks! Here is the code for the User class: public class User { private String userId; private String name; private Map userMap; public User(String userId, String name) {
