Google Australia has launched a new version of its Android-based messaging app, Google Allo, a month after the launch of Facebook's chat app. The Android and iOS application had previously been available in beta since June 14, but now has been rolled out to the general public, Google said. The app is "designed to make messaging fast, smart and private," according to a Google release. "Built on the Android operating system, it can deliver all your favourite messaging features to more people," it said. "It's powered by machine learning and all your messages are encrypted end-to-end, so your friends and family can't see your chats. "You can also give your conversations a voice, thanks to Google Assistant on your phone or smart speakers.

Or you can just keep things simple. Either way, there are no banners or notifications and your chats are yours alone."

The Allo app is free to download from the Google Play Store and Apple App Store. Cordis launches two new pro-angioplasty balloons The

Coda and the Atrux 3 The Cordis Atrux 3 is a new bipolar angioplasty balloon that is designed for treatment of chronic total occlusion of coronary and peripheral arteries. Available in diameters ranging from 3 to 10mm, the Atrux 3 is an angioplasty balloon that is designed to deliver optimal performance in the treatment of chronic total occlusions (CTOs).Role of particle size in the conversion of free and complexed vitamin B12. The bacteriologic assay for vitamin B12 is an important component of the diagnosis and control of vitamin B12 deficiency. However, it has several shortcomings. First, it is relatively insensitive and, second, it cannot distinguish between the forms of vitamin B12. Based on these
