Intel® Retail Experience Tool is a niche program, designed for those who buy or sell Intel hardware solutions. This application is a presentation, basically, with interactive features, showing the various characteristics and benefits of using certain Intel products. The interactive part is indeed convincing, and provided you are selling Intel products, it would come as a handy tool for raising sales in your shop. The app can even show recommended configurations for the products it promotes. A complex tool for product sales It's clear from starting the app to closing it that Intel hired the best in the field for this app to be made. It outlines every single advantage their products have. It shows comparisons between their own products to help you choose the best one for your needs. There are few aspects that don't look well. Apart from the menu, which does look a bit clogged and unordered, the rest falls in place perfectly. It's actually entertaining to watch Intel's presentation of its products. It's as if you were sitting in a meeting with Intel's CEO, and he was giving you all the facts he had regarding his new line of products. Comparisons and graphs

The strongest feature of Intel® Retail Experience Tool relates to the included graphs and interactive comparisons. The graphs compare product performance between themselves, while the comparison feature lets you drag and drop various products and compare them to your liking. This, in turn, lets you discover by yourself why you would like to buy a certain product and not the other.
