Asterisk Key, developed by Paplain. Asterisk Key developer tells us: In 2013, I was leaving my job at China Telecom and wanted to keep myself busy for the next few years. In my spare time, I started writing a PHP library for retrieving account information from web based applications such as online banking. I wanted to make it easy for others to use this and keep track of passwords and user names. I had written a few other similar applications but this was the first that I released. Asterisk Key should be an absolute must-have application for any computer user. If you are active on the Internet and like to assign a different password to each account you create, you might occasionally forget the credentials and need to reset the passkey in order to access the said account. Alternatively, you can try Asterisk Key. You will not encounter any issues during installation and the app will be up and running within seconds. The next step is to open the web browser where your password is hidden behind asterisks, the software analyzes it then displays the detected key. However, it needs to be mentioned that in order to be able to retrieve the passwords from any browser, you need to have previously allowed the browser to save the credentials when you logged in to the account. Additionally, you can also rely on Asterisk Key to recover passwords from dialog boxes, so you can still retrieve your passkey even if you have not stored it in a browser. In other words, the application can also extract passkeys from other compatible programs. Another feature of Asterisk Key is that it supports multi-lingual passwords, so even if you are not a native speaker of English, you can still retrieve your countersign without needing to find another dedicated software solution. Furthermore, Asterisk Key does not require a lot of computer resources in order to function properly, as it has been optimized to work even on older PC - even if you do not have a high amount of RAM or a new CPU model, the performance of the application is not affected. To wrap it up, you can give Asterisk Key a try, as long as your password is protected by asterisks in a browser or another program. If your key is not hidden behind asterisks, you might need to look for other solutions. Asterisk Key Description: • 09e8f5149f
