Boston College (BC) is more than well known for its football program, boasting a 207-90 record as of 2018. But in March, the university announced they had also scored a major touchdown in the world of esports. BC's esports team launched a new sponsorship deal in February with The Pants, which is a video game, fashion and lifestyle goods company. "We're very excited to have The Pants as the lead sponsor of our esports team," said Joel Ferguson, head coach for the Eagles. "We're a very involved campus and its awesome to have a partnership like this. We're getting used to it, we're learning to work together. We're looking to grow the team. We're looking to grow our brand." The team's foray into esports may be new, but it's certainly not new to Boston College. The BC Eagles are one of the oldest collegiate esports teams and has been ranked in the Top 25 for the past two years. "We're going to be a No. 1 crew," says Jimmy Song, Assistant Coach for BC's team. "We've seen it in interviews and we're seeing it. We have an amazing team." "Our goal is to be the number one. We're practicing more to be number one, to train more for that, so that we can have that victory in our back pocket." Unlike many other esports teams who are using players from their collegiate football teams, the BC Eagles have primarily placed players from other sports. The coaching staff uses up to 80 percent of the practice time to focus on their esports games. Song adds that the team has to put in a lot of work into recruiting. "We have big names, some of the biggest names in esports," Song continues. "We have a lot of talent and we are looking to add even more talent."
