Overview Folder Manifest is a free and open-source software application that lists all files and folders from a specified directory, in addition to properties such as timestamps, sizes and assembly versions. It's practical for those who want to generate reports on relevant documents, videos, programs and other types of files before reinstalling Windows, for backup, or for solely organizing data more efficiently. Installation Installing it doesn't take long, but you should make sure to have .NET Framework, since it was made with the help of this software framework. The interface consists of a single control panel as well as a new entry integrated into the Windows Explorer right-click menu for quickly listing all contents of a selected directory. The main window looks common and is easy to navigate. All customization properties are visible, giving you an overview before proceeding with operations. Once the full path of a folder is indicated using the tree view, Folder Manifest automatically shows the full path of all containing files. Pick the file properties to accompany the file names or paths. It's possible to make subfolder searching recursive, display the subfolder names, or show assembly versions along with the time and size. Instead of the full path listing, the utility can reveal each path as a header line, or display only the file name. Columns can be separated by tabs while information can be refreshed with the click of a button if any modifications have been made in the meantime in the given directory. The disappointment of this application is that it doesn't implement options for printing or exporting information to file. You can only select and copy contents to the Clipboard to paste them in a text editor and save a personal document. Another useful setting would've been filtering files by extension. Straightforward and practical file listing tool Despite these aspects, Folder Manifest proves to be a handy tool for creating reports with all file records from a given directory, helping you keep track of sensitive data. Operations were executed fast in our tests while CPU and RAM usage was minimal. AutoHotkey is a powerful open source AutoHotkey command line script that allows you to easily create keyboard hotkeys. It can be a quick and convenient solution to make many different tasks much easier than having to use the mouse. Script Description: This script allows you to control your trackpad via custom keyboard shortcuts. License: The script can be used freely, however, if you distribute it you must give credit to me, and optionally, make it available for download and reinstallation, on your website or anywhere else that's convenient. NOTE: This is a very simple script and is more intended to be a learning tool. It will not do everything you would like. For example, it does not give you an option to disable mouse clicks on the trackpad. Also, if you click on the trackpad then move the mouse pointer elsewhere you will still trigger the script to control the trackpad. This can be frustrating if you are trying to make it clear that your pointer needs to remain in one place on the screen. If you need to control a mouse cursor while still using your trackpad, you will need to buy a separate mouse with a built in trackpad or use a Windows 7 "programmable mouse" utility.
