Green Lane Art Green Lane Art is a contemporary art gallery in London, run by the London Borough of Ealing. The gallery was opened in 2004 in what was then the 'Matterley' arts and crafts shop by John Pedley and Debra Church, and has since expanded. It has a particular interest in painting, but also exhibits other art forms. The gallery is a member of London Art Studios, which aims to support a new generation of emerging artists and craftspeople. History The gallery was opened in 2004 in a former 'artists and crafts shop', with John Pedley and Debra Church as part of Ealing's 'Ealing Visual Arts Hub'. The project was partially funded by the Wellcome Trust, and supported by Arts Council England, Ealing Council and the Open Art Fund. The gallery originally stood in an Art and Design Centre on Green Lane, but later moved to the former 'Matterley' arts and crafts shop. This was opened in 1993 by John Cordner, who had previously run S.C.A.R.E.E.S. Children and their Environment and was based on Green Lane. The building was formerly occupied by the Century Furniture Company of Ealing, which closed in 2004. In 2015, the gallery was under the direction of Director Debbie Charles, and in 2018 was led by Director and Founder John Pedley. Collections The Green Lane Art collection features paintings, sculptures and prints by a range of British and international artists. It has exhibited work by Charlotte Wood, Joe Bradley, Richard Burch, Thomas Deverall, Mark Hatley, Philippa Rowley, Paul Sitney, Luis del Olmo Díaz and Julian Opie. In 2015 the gallery exhibited a 25-metre tall, tree-shaped lampost at the London Art Studios, and in 2018 exhibited large-scale monumental paintings by Greg Lippencott at the Dulwich Picture Gallery. The gallery also organises and exhibits work by a range of contemporary practitioners including artist and cartoonist Lynette Beckett.
