Portable FolderStyle allows to generate file listings by taking into account a wide range of filters Portable FolderStyle is capable of generating hierarchical file listings by taking into account a wide range of filters. Now you can organize your PC and Mac computers by subject, instead of having to search through dozens of files to find what you need. It doesn't modify Windows registry settings. You can save Portable FolderStyle settings to profile, so that you can quickly recover those setting for future use. Will not mess with disk partitions, but will process deep inside of the drive. It is possible to filter out folders, and to search for text in the files.Q: Wake on LAN switch with KVM/QEMU and Debian/Ubuntu I have a home office network setup with two ethernet cables (one for internal and one for external only). This allows me to easily connect/disconnect my laptop from the internet with ease. The problem is that I'm having troubles when I've set it to turn on the power with the WOL switch when I connect/disconnect it. I'm using a a Netgear WNDR3400 router to switch my internet connection and the switch is connected to it. The switch is connected to the external ethernet, which is connected to the VPS. My VPS is run by KVM/QEMU with a Debian 6. I checked and I'm using iptables. Here is the script: #!/usr/bin/env bash # Wake on LAN shutdown script (default = on) wol_script="/var/run/wol.sh" echo "File $wol_script" # Delete after 1 minute while [-x $wol_script]; do if [! -z "$1"]; then echo "Calling: $wol_script $1" # Suspend VPS /usr/local/sbin/ping -qc 2 -i eth0 10.0.0.1 > /dev/null
