Roblox is a user-generated, free-to-play, massively multiplayer online game, with over 64 million players worldwide, as of October 2019. In contrast to traditional sandbox games, Roblox games are procedurally generated and host thousands of players. It was developed by Roblox Corporation, a company started by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel, and was originally released in June 2004. Roblox was one of the first games to have a large community, and has been in the top-ranked games for the award for "Popularity" on Facebook, since 2015. In May 2013, it was announced that Roblox Corporation had secured nearly $14 million in venture capital financing. It was these funds that paid for one of Roblox Corporation's first upgrades, which was the addition of a built-in web browser for players that allowed them to interact with their Roblox games more easily. In June 2018, the company launched a live-streaming platform for Roblox. This allows players to play games in real time, with their friends, or as part of a real-time tournament. The platform is available only to those who have gained or aspire to gain Robux. Founder David Baszucki said that the streaming platform is the company's way of thinking about interactive entertainment in the era of online games. Roblox is licensed under the GNU GPL v3.0. In March 2018, Roblox was ranked first for "Best Game Experience" in Facebook's "Annual Trending Live Events" report. According to the company's CEO, no other game in the world was top-ranked for both "Best Game Experience" and "Best User Experience." One of Roblox's distinguishing features is its procedural generation. Roblox games are created using a game development environment, which is based on Lua, an open-source programming language. The system has three core programming paradigms: logic gates, function calls, and events. The default interface for Roblox is a tree that players organize their games into "rooms," which contain specific types of content, including "blocks." Players can place these "blocks" in the "floor" of the room, and create a game by adding blocks to the "walls" of the room. Players can customize the appearance of their game by placing the different "decor" blocks, which give players the ability to change the color, shape, texture, and animation
